Dear families,

This week, the All Saints School students and staff have been celebrating Catholic Schools Week. The Catholic Schools Week theme this year is “Faith. Excellence. Service.” These are the very tenets Catholic schools are built upon.

It is fitting that faith is the first focus in the theme of Catholic Schools Week, as this is the first focus in the mission of Catholic education, with all areas stemming from the belief in and love of Christ. Families are the first teachers in the faith; not only in their religious practices, but in raising their children with love, respect, and a strong sense of morals. We are fortunate to have classrooms filled with students who have already been shown how to walk-in Jesus’ footsteps. It is through these beginnings that teachers can continue to help students grow in their faith. The strong foundation you have provided for your child will carry them into their adult lives.

Excellence is demonstrated at All Saints School in ways that extend beyond the traditional scope of academics. All Saints School aims to support the education of the whole child. We are immensely thankful for the teachers and staff who work tirelessly to provide a quality education to all of our students. We are also incredibly thankful for our families and the support they have shown to our teachers and our school. Without the partnership we have with parents, academic excellence would be impossible.

Thank you for your continued faith in the mission of Catholic education and for entrusting the most precious gift into our school, your children.

God Bless,
Katy Rankin
